

Motorola V3

Gift-wrapped luxury this Christmas comes in the slender shape of the Motorola V3. This stunning mobile phone cuts the grade, with its aircraft grade aluminium shell and its nickel plated precision etched keypad with electro-luminescent lighting, all wrapped into one of the slimmest phones on the market. Just 13.9mm thin the V3 doesn't compromise on the technical spec - offering an inbuilt VGA camera, Bluetooth®, quad-band, Java gaming, and video clip playback. The V3 doesn't just look stunning; it sounds great too with its crisp, clear customisable MP3 ringtones. The Motorola V3 will make the perfect present this year for anyone who likes to indulge themselves with luxury products and has a desire to experience the best.

Experience the unmatched noise reduction and performance of our QuietComfort® 2 Acoustic Noise Cancelling® headphones

Order by 30 January 2005 to receive a free personal CD Player. Noise is everywhere. Fly on an aeroplane, and the engine roar drowns out your CD, DVD or in-flight entertainment. Trying to concentrate in the home or at the office? The bustle makes that difficult too. But there is an escape: The QuietComfort® 2 Acoustic Noise Cancelling headphones from Bose. U.S. patented technology electronically identifies and reduced unwanted noise while faithfully preserving the music, movie dialogue or silence that you desire.

See yourself on TV

At first sight Mirror TV looks familiar.

It's a mirror.

Slim profile, choice of frames, the perfect reflection of its surroundings.

Then you hit the remote control.

Suddenly it's not a mirror, it's a flat screen TV.

It can show a pin sharp picture from its built-in TV tuner, satellite, cable, DVD or external PC.

It can even have its own built-in multimedia computer, so you can access e-mails or internet, play MP3 audio or MPEG video files, or go large on your favourite games. 'Til you zap the off switch.

And it's a mirror again.

Who says there's nothing on telly at Christmas?

Available in 20" to 55" Hitachi plasma or LCD screens, from £1,950.
